1. The first of these is the fact that the majority of the population of the United States is now living in urban areas. This is a result of the process of urbanization, which has been going on since the beginning of the 20th century. The population of the United States has increased from about 100 million in 1900 to over 200 million in 1950, and the majority of this increase has been in urban areas. This has led to a concentration of population in a few large cities, which has in turn led to a number of problems, such as overcrowding, pollution, and traffic congestion.

SOME AMERICAN PRONUNCIATIONS

Eng.		Eng.
ä	ä (or more exactly various shorter forms of the vowel, not a single form) is very common in place of English ä .	a	Some Americans tend to make a sound approaching e , so that marry , for instance, approximates to merry .
aw	The alternative form ä is common in words such as haunt , saunter , taunt , vaunt .	e	This has a sound suggesting, but not identical with, ü in words such as America , conferring , &c.
o	A longer vowel than the normal British one is heard in words like coffee , long , office , officer , soft , Boston , &c. In words such as probable , proper , ä is widely used.	i	The sound heard in squirrel , stirring , stirrup , and commonly also in syrup , approaches ä .
ü	In British English this diphthong is yöü , in American English it is iöö . In some speech it loses its diphthongal character altogether.	u	In English, when ur is followed by a vowel, the sound of the u is not ä , but Americans tend to pronounce the same vowel in her and hurry . Other examples are furry , occurring , worry —and also courage .

Vowels before r:

ä	Two main diphthongs are heard both in England and in America, and in one of these diphthongs the first element approaches a lengthened form of ä , so that e.g. vary and Mary suggest drawled forms of very and merry . In America sometimes—particularly in longer words—the second element of the diphthong disappears altogether; the usual pronunciation of Maryland , for instance, is mer'i-land , and some speakers also say mer'i for Mary .	-ary , -ory	Americans give words in -ary and -ory a stronger secondary accent and pronounce -ar'i or -er'i and -ör'i . Examples are necessary , monetary , secondary , temporary ; obligatory , peremptory , respiratory .
		Words in -ile	In the commoner words Americans pronounce il , as agile (aj'il), fertile (fər'til), fragile , frigate , hostile . In infantile , juvenile , mercantile , versatile , both il and il are heard; and gentile is always pronounced il .

The following individual words differ in typical British and American pronunciation, though in some cases both pronunciations can be heard in both countries.
